

GLOBE TROTTING

August 11, 2007

The Suite Life

What does $40,000 buy? If you're a well-heeled traveler, it's one night at the Hugh Hefner Sky Villa, a two-story, 10,000-square-foot hideaway with a $700,000 cantilevered Jacuzzi that juts over the Las Vegas Strip, a rotating bed beneath a mirrored ceiling and around-the-clock butler service. The Playboy-themed escape, which opened last fall at the Palms Casino Resort, is the most expensive of 101 hotel suites featured in a just-released annual survey by Elite Traveler, a magazine distributed aboard private jets and mega-yachts to readers with average household incomes of more than $5 million. Editors tapped 14 well-traveled celebrities, including Wimbledon champion Roger Federer and performers Kim Cattrall, Harry Connick Jr. and Cuba Gooding Jr., to help review the suites, which were judged on luxury, location, privacy and one-of-a-kind design.